

Telling lies to save one's life

In the forest, there lived a fox and his wife. Once while searching for food...

..they saw flock of sheep.

They were waiting for the right time for many hours.

Whenever a lamb strayed out of the group, they attacked and killed her.

But there was one clever sheep who realised that his other friends are being eaten up by the fox.

So the sheep decided to stay back in the cave.

Even for the search of the food, she decided not to go far...

Slowly all the sheep were killed and only this clever sheep was left.
The wife of the fox knew about this clever sheep and so she started thinking of a plan to kill her.

My dear sister
are you at home ?

I do not want to speak with
you. You are a murderer,
who killed my
other sisters.

No, I did not
killed your fellow
sheeps, it was all evil
intention of my wicked husband.

If I continue to stay in side this cave then there will not be any danger.

In this way they started speaking to each other for the next whole week.

My dear
sheep, please help me I lost my husband . The vultures will eat him.
Please help me to bury him.

Believing on the fox word, the sheep decided to go with her.

When they reached near the cave, the sheep found something unusual and started walking very carefully.

The sheep suddenly saw the fox opening his eyes and realised that she was tricked to be eaten up by them.

So she ran quickly back to her cave.

The fox wife came back to sheep as she was hungry.

A cartoon illustration depicting a scene from the fable of the boy who cried wolf. On the left, a brown wolf is crouching on a green grassy field, looking towards a donkey on the right. The donkey is grey with a brown mane and tail, and its mouth is open as if speaking. A speech bubble from the donkey contains the text. The background features large, dark brown rocks and a small bird flying in the sky.

You are a liar, You tricked
me and tried to kill me.

No No,
It was a miracle,
Because of your divine
power my husband
got his life back.

The sheep did not believe her words.

My husband has invited you for lunch at my home as a token of thanks.

Sure! Because you are my friend I will accept your invitation. However, I will be accompanied by my army of voracious dogs, who are my bodyguards. Thus, insted of coming for lunch, we will come for dinner so that you may find enough time to cook for so many.

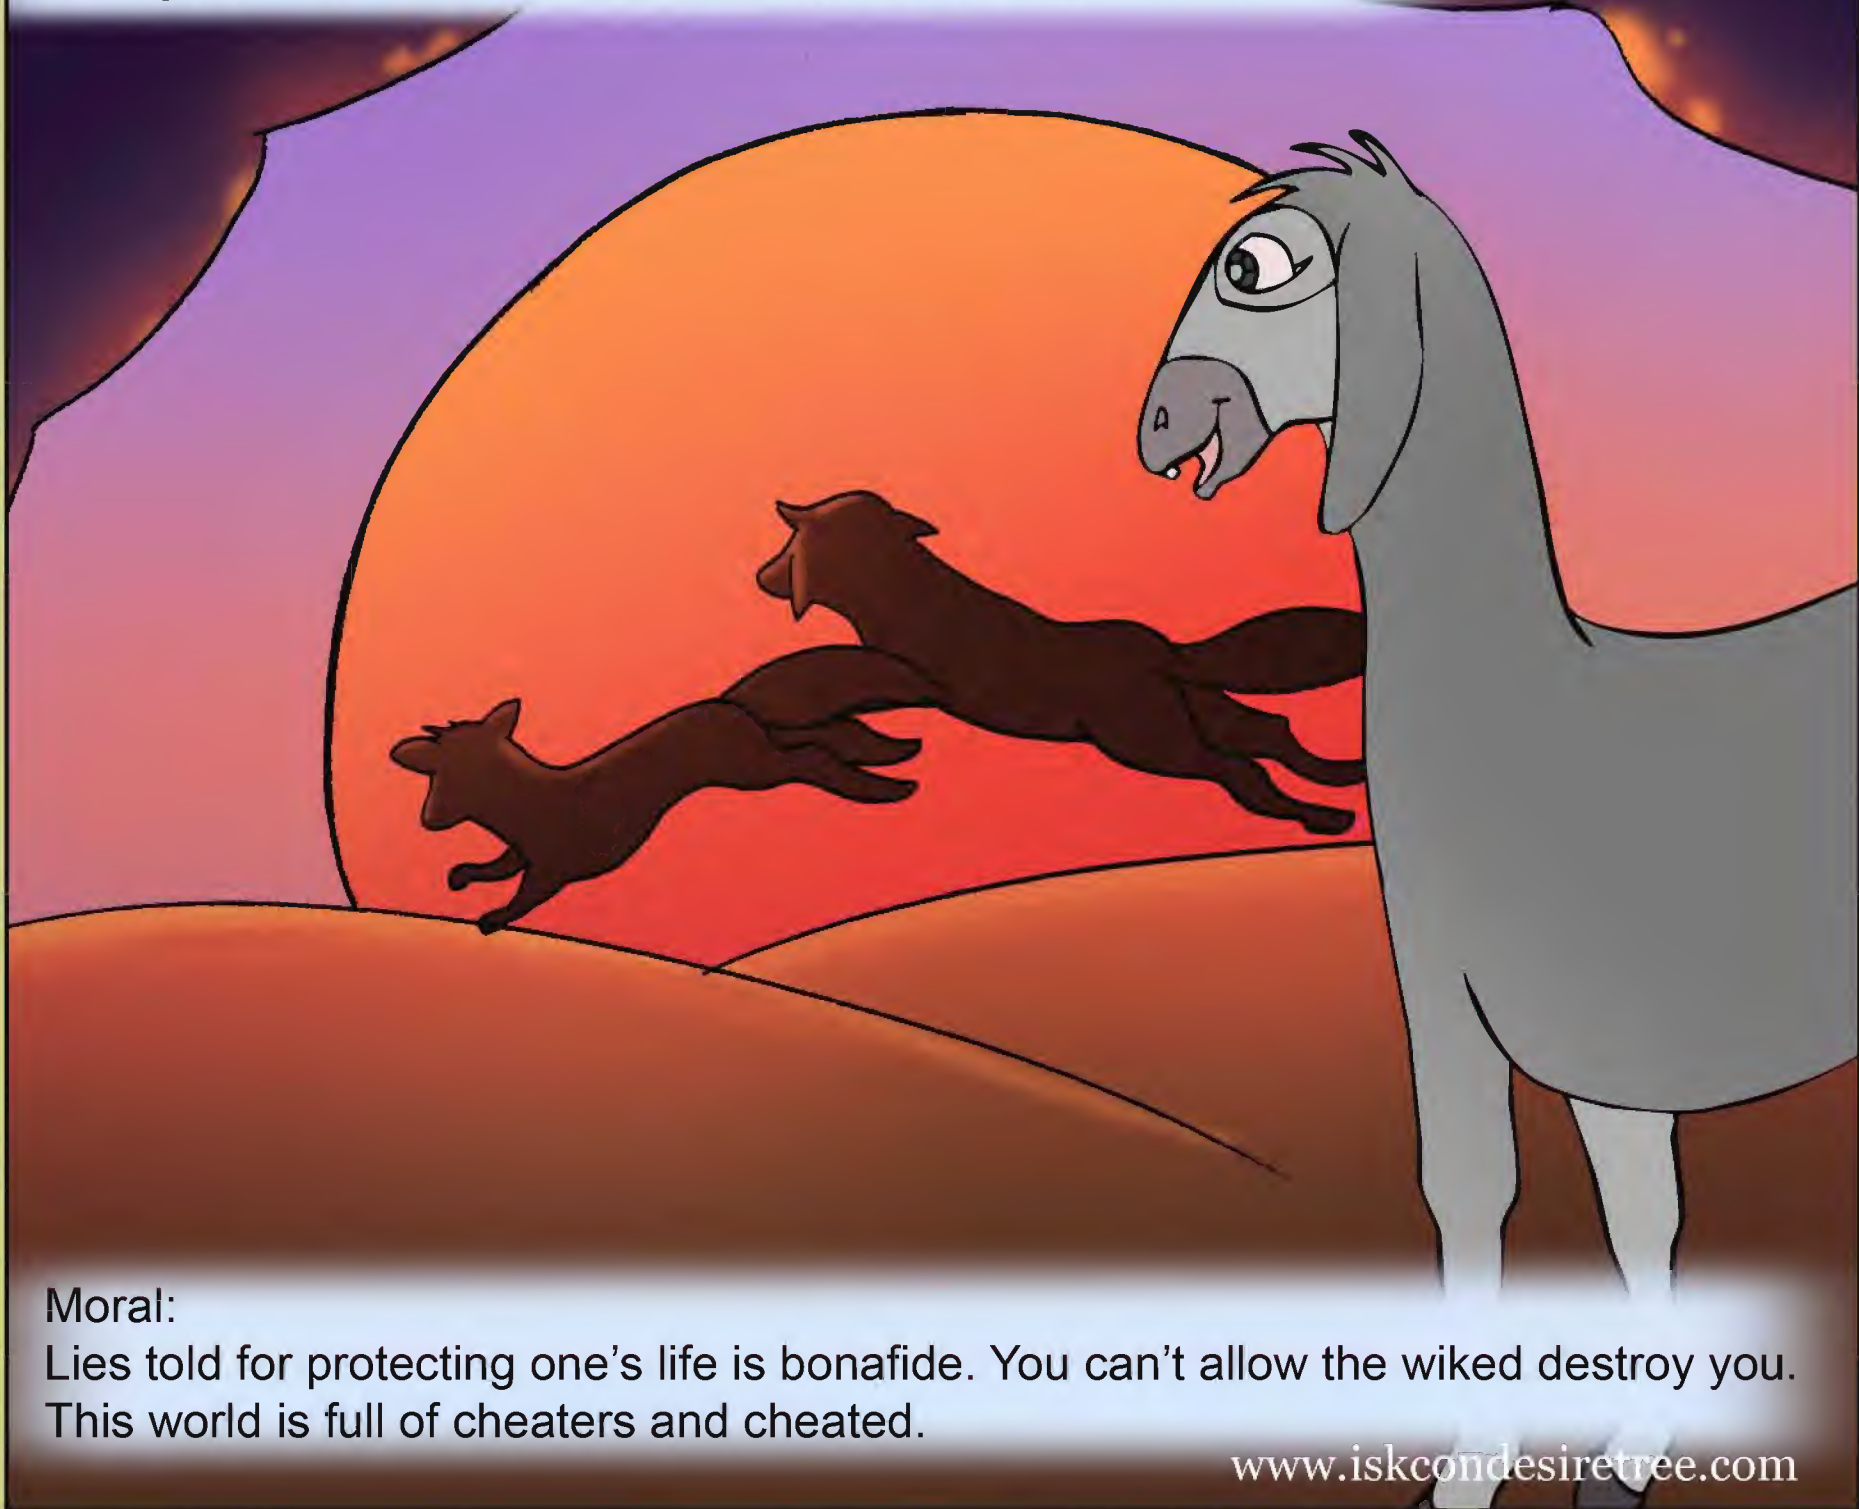

After hearing this the fox got scared because the sheep's bodyguard dogs were their enemies.

Fearing for their life the fox and his wife left that place for ever.

Moral:

Lies told for protecting one's life is bonafide. You can't allow the wiked destroy you.
This world is full of cheaters and cheated.
